HIGH SCHOOL BOYS NOT HOME

Boys Given Special Permission to Go on Three Day Base Ball Trip not Home. May be Punished upon their Return.

Where is the Gettysburg High School base ball team and what will happen to its members when they return, are two questions which are agitating Gettysburg school circles today in view of the fact that the boys who were given special permission to go on a three day Southern trip have not yet turned up. It is even rumored that they intend to stay away until Thursday and there is naturally some excitement among pupils and teachers.

Prof. Burgoon, supervising principal, when seen this afternoon regarding the failure of the boys to be on hand for the opening of school this morning said that he had given the matter little thought as he believed the boys might have missed a train or been detained in some similar way. When told of the rumor that they intended to complete their schedule as first arranged and take no account of the authorities' ruling Mr. Burgoon said:

"Surely if that is their intention it would be the basest sort of ingratitude. If they complete their southern trip now it shows that such was their intention when they left here or they would have cancelled their games. They cannot give the excuse of being persuaded by the other teams to fulfill their contracts."

Prof. Burgoon stated that of those on the trip six are High School boys. The remainder are recruited from town and college. Two of the six High School boys are Seniors.

"Will those two be allowed to graduate with their class if it is determined that the boys have acted in defiance of the school authorities?" was asked of Prof. Burgoon.

"That is a matter for the School Board," was the answer.

A rather uncomfortable time is accordingly in store for the boys when they return unless some satisfactory excuse can be produced for their prolonged absence. The announcement of the orations for commencement is being withheld pending developments.

FOR MEMORIAL DAY

Corporal Skelly Post 9 and the other Grand Army posts in the county are interested in the general order for Memorial Day observance from general headquarters which reads in part as follows:

Forty four years ago May 30 was set apart as Memorial Day, with the hope that it would be kept from year to year while a survivor of the Civil War remained to honor the memory of his departed comrades.

"But the Reapers have been relentlessly wielding his sickle furnishing a constant reminder, that year by year the number of the survivors becomes smaller, and year by year the number of graves, to be strewn with flowers is growing larger. Forty thousand new graves are to be decorated the coming Memorial Day.

"Thus reminded that the time is fast approaching when survivors of the war can no longer keep up the proper observance of Memorial Day, shall the observance of the day cease in any community when the bugle has sounded 'taps' at the grave of the last 'survivor'? If not, it becomes a matter of the greatest importance, everywhere, so to interest the people at large in the beautiful and suggestive ceremonies of Memorial Day, that they will recognize and adopt it as their day now; theirs to celebrate now jointly with the 'survivors of the war'; theirs to celebrate 'alone' when the last survivor shall have passed away.

"In this way, and in this way only, will the perpetuity of Memorial Day be assured, and so long as the nation shall live the choicest flowers of garden and field and woodland shall be summoned, each successive thirtieth of May, to bear their silent testimony to the gratitude of a nation saved."

In closing, the order sets forth: that the Posts making arrangements associate with them Women's Relief Corps, Sons of Veterans, Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic, and the Daughters of Veterans, and invite all other patriotic societies, especially the volunteers of the Spanish War, and the Philippine Insurrection, to take part in the celebration of the day.

It is further ordered that as a part of the public exercises bells be tolled from twelve to twelve five, that flags be placed at half mast and that comrades stand with uncovered heads while the bells are tolling. It is requested that the day be emphasized Memorial Day and not Decoration Day, as the latter is not the proper name.

TOWN CLEAN-UP IS COMPLETED

One Hundred and Sixty Large Wagon-loads of Rubbish and Debris Cleared away by Borough Highway Force.

Gettysburg finished cleaning house on Saturday and when a general review of the work was taken it was found that no less than one hundred and sixty large two horse wagon-loads of dirt, rubbish and debris had been removed from backyards and alleys. All of this was hauled to the borough dumping ground—the old Minnigh ice pond on West Middle street.

Thursday two teams were at work and Friday and Saturday four teams each day. They averaged sixteen loads a day, the men working as rapidly as possible to get the big task finished. The manner in which many citizens took advantage of the opportunity to get their places cleaned up was the subject for much comment among the force who did the work.

One party put out so much debris that it took five wagon-loads to clear up the pile which he had collected. Not for many years had any effort been made to clean his premises. At another place three loads were required. Ashes, tin cans, buggy tops, anything at all objectionable was put out for removal. If ever town council did anything in which they received the hearty co-operation of the citizens it was in the municipal house cleaning idea.

Now that it is all over and Gettysburg is considerably cleaner than before the work was started, the borough authorities are considering the advisability of making it an annual event. It is claimed that many people, who had their own ashes and rubbish hauled away before this year's clean up was announced, will wait in future years for the borough to do it for them and the task will be so much larger as a result. Some claim council should take action to compel people to keep their premises reasonably clear of rubbish.

It is rather difficult to secure teams for work such as that of last week, owing to the danger of horses being cut by tin cans, glass, etc., at the dumping ground and the highway force especially is anxious that arrangement be made so that the work in the future will not be so extensive as it proved this past week.

WAR COLLEGE ON WAY HERE

Army War College Detachment Starts on Month's Tour of Battlefield to Conclude with Visit to Gettysburg Field.

En route to Gettysburg, a War College detachment of about sixty men, as many horses, thirteen wagons, each drawn by four mules, ambulances, tents, supplies, etc., has arrived at Fredericksburg, Va., in charge of Lieut. J. D. Dickey and Lieut. H. S. Bradford U. S. A.

War College officers numbering about forty arrived at the camp on Saturday by rail and went into camp. They will remain about four days. Each day they will visit the battlefields, and lectures having particular reference to the battle fought on the field viewed at the time will be delivered by prominent army officers. Among those who will lecture are Capt. White, Capt. Roebenbach and Capt. E. J. Williams.

From Fredericksburg the detachment will go to Chancellorsville, Wilderness, Spotsylvania, and on to Richmond, returning by Louisa, Gordonsville, Orange, Rapidan, Culpepper, Fauquier, White Sulphur Springs, crossing the Potomac to Point of Rocks on June 6, going thence to Frederick, Antietam and Gettysburg.

The detachment will remain in Gettysburg for several days in a study of the battlefield. A banquet at the Eagle Hotel will be one of the events of their stay here this year. The return to Washington will be started on June 10.

GETTYSBURG COMPANY TO CAMP

Company B Sixth Battalion, Sons of Veterans Reserves, of Gettysburg, will go into camp this year at Reading from June 15 to 22. The indications at present are that there will be between 20 and 25 men under Captain Wm. Meli. Tawney, under canvas. The company will not provide its own "mess" this year, but instead will be fed at the brigade commissary.

This will be the first time that this company has been in camp as part of the Sixth separate battalion, which was organized from unattached companies only last July.

Major Paul Smyser, formerly captain of Company A, York, is in command of the battalion. Lieutenant J. Clifford Hoffman is his adjutant and George T. Yeaple, an efficient national guardsman is the sergeant major. Every company of the battalion will be in camp this year. These companies are: A, York; B, Gettysburg; D, Reading; F, New Oxford; I, Newminton, band, Reading, and a new company now being formed in Middletown, which will probably be designated as C.

The Gettysburg company now numbers 30 men and one officer. That there is but one officer for this company is because of a recent ruling of the brigade board of officers that the ratio of men to officers must be increased.

FIGHTING SCRUB OAK

Forester Robert G. Conklin, of the Caledonia State Reserve, is at present engaged in a work that will likely prove of much benefit to the work in which he is engaged. The effort being made is to find out by experiment the best way of reclaiming tracts from scrub oak, which is of no commercial value.

Three one acre tracts are being used in the experiment, each tract being treated in a different manner. Under planting with other trees is being done, and the tract that shows the best results will indicate the best method.

GOOD CONCERT

The college orchestra gave an exceptionally fine concert in Brax Chapel before an appreciative audience Saturday evening. The numbers by the orchestra and the various solos by members were all well received. Chester R. Kirk, of Steelton, sustained his reputation as an entertainer of no mean ability.

TOO HIGH FOR HANOVER

About seventy five Gettysburg people went to Hanover Saturday evening to witness "The Girl of My Dreams," a musical comedy at the Hanover Opera House. The ability of the principal characters, John Hyams and Lelia McIntire, is well recognized and the chorus was very creditable for a show making one night stands. The production aroused more than usual local interest, probably due to the fact that Mr. Joseph Gaites, the owner, has friends in town. A noticeable feature of the attendance was that all the two dollar seats sold were occupied by Gettysburg people. Miss Elizabeth Hay Cox entertained a number of her friends in a box.

GIRL ARRESTED FOR MURDER

Charged With Killing Burgomaster in Saxony.

ROBBED HIM OF $70,000

Betrayed by Victim's Son, She Is Accused of Stabbing Him to Death and Fleeing to America.

Philadelphia, May 6.—Chased more than 10,000 miles, and accused of the murder of Burgomaster Cuttleb, of Ungethum, Saxony, and of stealing $70,000, Marie Purtz, twenty years old, was arraigned before Magistrate Coward, at the central station.

She was held for appearance before United States Commissioner Edmunds, in the federal building. Dr. Arthur Mudra, German consul, will then make application for extradition papers for her return to Germany.

Pinkerton detectives in the employ of the German government, who arrested the girl at the home of her mother, in Corapolis, a small town near Pittsburgh, declared they have located a major portion of the $70,000, which, they say, the girl gave to relatives for safe keeping.

The murder occurred in January, and since that time the girl, with her infant daughter, had, until her arrest, successfully outwitted the sleuths employed by the German government. Without being able to speak a word of English, she found her way about the country, and had no trouble in guarding the satchel which contained gold pieces and securities amounting to $70,000, which, it is alleged, she stole from the safe in the burgomaster's office, after plunging a knife into his heart.

The story of the little girl, who is barely twenty years of age, reveals the pride of caste as arrayed against those born of peasant origin.

More than a year ago Marie Purtz left the little farm of her father and accepted work in the inn of Carl Cuttleb, who was not only the proprietor of Ungethum's only hotel, but was burgomaster of his township.

There she met the young son of the host, Frederick, and the first romance of her life, which was so soon to end in tragedy, began.

Unlearned in the ways of the world, and believing that the handsome young man with his ardent attentions was the prince and knight errant of her dreams, she believed the honeyed words that fell from his lips and trusted him.

The burgomaster had a trace of noble blood in his veins, and he was anxious that his son should marry well and revive the old house.

The rude awakening came when a baby girl was born. Having a suspicion of the truth, the old man demanded, with darkening brows, an explanation. With his head bowed in shame the son said:

"Father, it is my child; I have wronged Marie and I wish to marry her and make her happy."

The old burgomaster was filled with wrath. His outraged pride destroyed his sense of justice and his reason, and pounding his stained oak bar in the little grill room with his clenched fist he shouted:

"You shall never marry her; she is a common peasant."

The father's word was law with the son, and going to Marie he told her of the result of the interview. Her dark eyes swelled with tears of grief, and with a sob of despair she buried her head in the cradle where her infant lay sleeping.

Suddenly she sat up with her little hands clenched and her eyes darting flashes of indignation.

"I will see your father myself," she said in a tense voice. "He shall allow you to marry me, for God would say it is just thing to do."

No one knows exactly what happened in the office of the burgomaster when the girl tapped on the oaken door and walked in. Voices raised in high dispute were heard by some of the servants about the inn, and then there was silence.

Some time later the old burgomaster was found lying dead on the floor. His safe was rifled of its gold pieces and securities. Little Marie and her babe had disappeared.

The German government took an immediate interest in the case, because a large portion of the money and valuables stolen was the property of the township of which Cuttleb was burgomaster.

In the meantime, little Marie had fled to Antwerp, where she took passage to Boston. Arriving in the Hub, she remained there for a few days and then went to Corapolis, where she was arrested.

MEXICAN REBELS NAME PRESIDENT

Hope to Get Recognition From United States.

El Paso, Tex., May 6.—Emilio Vasquez Gomez, a Mexican lawyer, was appointed provisional president of Mexico by proclamation of General Pascual Orozco, now at the front with the rebel troops threatening the federal base at Torreón.

Junrez is now the provisional capital, but this probably will be shifted to Chihuahua. The appointment was determined upon, it is said, chiefly for what effect it might have upon the United States. The rebels hope that now they may succeed in having their belligerency recognized.

When Washington a year ago recognized Francisco I. Madero the latter was in control of little else than Juarez and Diaz held the rest of Mexico. At present the rebels control the states of Chihuahua, Sonora, Durango, most of Coahuila and certain contiguous territory. Their troops, outnumbering the federals, have taken the offensive and are moving south over the Chihuahua-Coahuila border.

DEATH IN BARBER'S NICK

Midshipman Soon to Have Been Graduated the Victim.

Annapolis, Md., May 6.—Blood poisoning from an infection of a virulent type, caused by the nick of a barber's razor while he was being shaved, caused the death of Midshipman Julian Bishop, of New York.

The young man was a popular member of the first class, stood well in his studies and in about four weeks would have completed the course and been commissioned an ensign in the navy.

After being slightly cut on the cheek young Bishop developed an infection which rapidly grew more pronounced. His mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Bishop, of New York, were with their son until his death.

T. R. PASSES LIE TO TAFT

Says He Knew All About Harvester Trust Decision.

ANTI-TRUST SUITS FAKES

Roosevelt In a Statement Charges President With Being Guilty of Connivance at Election Frauds.

Oyster Bay, N. Y., May 6.—After reading reports of speeches made by President Taft in Maryland, Theodore Roosevelt wrote a long hand statement in answer that goes further than any of the campaign documents to date.

In this statement he directly charges the president with being guilty of connivance at election frauds. He practically gives the lie direct to the president in regard to the question of the anti-trust law.

The colonel says that Wall street has evidently made up its mind that Taft prosecutions are fake prosecutions and points to the increase in stock values of Standard Oil, American Tobacco and Harvester trust as evidence of Wall street's opinion. He says that the president's statements in regard to the harvester trust prosecution make it impossible to reconcile Taft's present position with any standard of honorable conduct.

"Mr. Taft," he continues, "says that I criticize because he prosecuted the Standard Oil and tobacco companies to the supreme court and got decisions there. On the contrary, Mr. Taft knows well that I criticized him for not having thus continued the prosecution of the suits that I had begun, but because after he had gotten these decisions he then permitted the department of justice to shape matters that the result was a complete nullification of all the good results of his suit."

"His conduct in this respect is quite incompatible with any sincere purpose really to enforce the anti-trust law. As a result of his action the stocks of the corporations in question rose greatly in value, the rise in the Standard Oil stocks being over $200,000,000. Mr. Taft can hardly have failed to notice that, following his institution of a suit against the harvester trust, Harvester stock went up two points."

"Evidently Wall street has made up its mind that Mr. Taft's prosecutions are fake prosecutions, whereas the bitter hostility of Wall street to me shows how lively is its memory of the fact that prosecutions were really prosecutions and hurt the persons prosecuted."

"Mr. Taft knew all the facts about the harvester trust decision and he was present at a cabinet meeting where they were all discussed, and at that cabinet meeting and also in private conversation with me, he repeatedly and emphatically approved the course actually taken just as he repeatedly and emphatically approved the course taken as regards the Tennessee Coal and Iron company."

"The Archbold case (now before congress owing to the fact that congress forced the president's hand) shows that Mr. Taft appointed on the new commerce court at the request of Mr. Penrose a judge whose unfitness for the office had already been brought before him; and what has since happened to the judge is merely what Mr. Taft might have foreseen if he had considered the interest of the people instead of being intent on trying to secure the delegates from Pennsylvania by placating the Pennsylvania boss."

"In Kentucky and Indiana, in New York city and elsewhere, Mr. Taft knows well that the delegates elected for him represent barfaced frauds. He stands guilty of connivance at and condonation of these frauds."

With regard to Lorimer, Mr. Roosevelt practically repeats what he has already said with regard to Taft's support of the Illinois senator.

BELT BUCKLE STOPS BULLET

Probably Saves Life of Girl When Esports Are Wounded.

Wilmington, Del., May 6.—A belt buckle is believed to have saved the life of Jennie Cammollie, a young colored woman, of Marshallton.

With Elwood and John Pritchett, the girl was returning from a party, when Frank Brown, also colored, is alleged to have opened fire with a pistol. The two Pritchetts were wounded and were sent to a hospital, and a bullet struck the belt buckle of the girl, but was deflected. Brown was arrested and held for court.

Favor Big Cut In Sugar Duty.

Washington, May 6.—Democratic members of the senate committee on finance practically agreed to favor a reduction of 3 1/2 per cent from the present tariff on sugar and voted to abolish the Dutch standard and differential on sugar. This will be carried out in a provision which will be offered as an amendment to the Democratic house free sugar bill.

40,000 NEW GRAVES TO DECORATE

Death Takes Many G. A. R. Veterans Since Last Year.

Philadelphia, May 6.—Forty thousand new graves of the veterans of the Civil War are to be decorated on Memorial Day, May 30.

A mere handful of the men, bent and grizzled and weakened with age, a pitiful remnant of the hundreds of thousands who marched to the defense of the Union, are left to pay the sacred tribute to their dead comrades.

These facts are included in the general order for Memorial Day observance which has been issued from the headquarters of the Grand Army of the Republic.

The five-minute pause for "remember" will be observed throughout the country at the same moment and all Grand Army veterans will stand with uncovered heads while the bells are being tolled.

In closing the order sets forth: That the posts making arrangements associate with them Women's Relief Corps, Sons of Veterans, Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic and the Daughters of Veterans, and invite all other patriotic societies, especially the volunteers of the Spanish War and the Philippine Insurrection, to take part in the celebration of the day.

It is further ordered that as a part of the public exercises bells be tolled from 12 to 12:05 o'clock, that flags be placed at half-mast and that comrades stand with uncovered heads while the bells are tolling. It is requested that the day be emphasized as Memorial Day and not Decoration Day, as the latter is not the proper name.

TWO BROTHERS DROWN

Harrisburg Youths Try to Go Down Susquehanna In Canoes.

Lancaster, Pa., May 6.—Leroy and Carl Young, brothers, residing in Harrisburg, were drowned, and Gilbert Oges and Morris Glace, of the same city, had a narrow escape from sharing the same fate in the Susquehanna river.

The young men started from Harrisburg in two canoes to go down the river to the Chesapeake bay. The young brothers occupied one boat and Oges and Glace the other. They reached McCall's Ferry safely and carried their canoes around the big dam. The water below the dam for a considerable distance is very rapid, and when the canoeists resumed their trip they began to experience trouble.

At Wissler's run, not far from the dam, the rapids are particularly dangerous. When the canoes struck this stretch they were flung about like corks and both capsized. Men on shore witnessed the accident and at once went to the assistance of the young men. Oges and Glace were saved, but before help could reach them both the Young brothers drowned. The bodies were not recovered.

ANOTHER CROSS STITCH IDEA

Charming Way of Giving Up to Date Touch on a Scarf of White Crepe de Chine.

The vogue of the clinging silken scarf, giving a filmy yet real protection to bare shoulders, will continue to grow, since it has dawned on the dainty woman with what ease it can be loosely knotted in the fashion of a fichu.

Embroidery has to be used on these scarfs with a certain amount of judgment, as otherwise the finishing stitches at the back may be exposed by an inadvertent reversing of the material. A very new and charming way of giving the up to date touch on a scarf of white crepe de Chine has been recently noted; cross stitching, of course—and in two toned effects of pale blue, delicate leaf green, a pastel rose or two light shades of tender violet. On each side of the scarf a band of this attractive work extends across each end and is a wider motif carrying out the same design.

But—and here comes in the wise thought—each band of work is done so that the plain material turns in under it to form a hem, which is folded into place and finished after the cross stitch has been completed and pressed. The bands at the two long sides should be about two inches wide, but those at the ends can be anywhere from four to six inches deep, and can be finished, when all else is done, by a silken fringe of the hues chosen for the cross stitching. If preferred, a quaint variation of this hem finish for the scarf ends can be made by curving or otherwise shaping the inner line of the hem to accommodate the pattern used. But if it is also wished to make the lower edge curved it will be necessary to face a hem of the shape desired instead of merely folding in the silk or crepe.

The fringe can follow this line exactly or can be curved in more pronounced effect by being made deeper in the center than at each side.

The Whole World Is to Participate In the Great San Francisco Panama-Pacific Exposition In 1915

By HAMILTON M. WRIGHT,
THE whole world is interested in the opening of the Panama canal and in the great international fete at which the United States will celebrate the completion of the canal, the Panama-Pacific International exposition, to be held in San Francisco in 1915.

The proclamation of the president, issued by authority of congress, has been delivered through the instrumentality of the department of state to every quarter of the globe. Inquiries as to the exposition are pouring in upon the exposition management from all parts of the world. The nations of the world in recognition of America's great

huge Grecian columns adorned with the flags of all the nations of the world and surmounted at convenient intervals by classic arcades. At the junction of these two streets will be erected a civic center. The buildings in this architectural group will cost close to $9,000,000. The nucleus of the civic center will be a new city hall to take the place of the one destroyed in 1906. The exposition authorities have voted the sum of $1,000,000 for a great auditorium to accommodate visitors to conventions during the exposition. A great opera house will be erected by private capital at the civic center, and the famous singers of the world will be heard in San Francisco in exposition

MARYLAND IS VOTING TODAY

All the Candidates Claim the State.

NO DIVIDED DELEGATIONS

Whoever Carries the State by Counties Gets All the Sixteen Delegates.

Baltimore, Md., May 6.—Maryland's first presidential primary election today will decide the votes of the sixteen delegates this state will send to the national convention.

The importance of the election is increased by the fact that the law permits no divided delegation. A victory in Maryland will mean sixteen delegates all in a block, bound to support the candidate for whom they are instructed until they "conscientiously" believe he no longer has a chance of winning the nomination.

While this feature of the instructions has been variously interpreted, it is without dispute conceded to hold the delegates at least for the first ballot at the national conventions.

The names of Theodore Roosevelt and President Taft appear on the Republican ballot, while the Democrats have the privilege of voting for Speaker Champ Clark, Governor Judson Harmon or Governor Woodrow Wilson. Active campaigns have been waged on behalf of all these candidates, and to judge from the claims of the opposing leaders, none of them is likely to win by a wide margin.

The election will choose 129 delegates to the state convention representing the various counties and the legislative districts of Baltimore city, and each county or district will bind its delegates to vote for a national delegation favorable to the presidential candidate for whom such county or district declares its preference. Victory, therefore, will depend upon the preferential vote by counties or districts and not upon the popular preference of the state as a whole.

President Taft's supporters expect to carry all the southern and eastern counties and at least part of Baltimore. The Roosevelt leaders said they were sure of the western part of the state and confident of winning all the twenty-eight delegates from Baltimore city.

Sueker Clark is backed in Baltimore by the regular Democratic city organization, and his supporters count on all the city delegates and enough from outside to control the convention.

A statement by the Wilson committee counts on seventy-eight delegates, or thirteen more than the required majority. It is conceded that the New Jersey governor's strength lies in the country districts. Governor Harmon's candidacy has been backed by the anti-organization Democrats, who claim for him a large plurality in the counties and have been making a good fight in Baltimore.

In addition to the presidential preference both parties will nominate candidates for members of congress.

The polls will open at 6 a. m. and close at 5 p. m. in Baltimore city, and open at 8 a. m. and close at 6 p. m. in the counties.

Under the law the entire Democratic vote will be counted first.

FIGHTING FOR OHIO

Taft and Roosevelt to Stump State For Delegates.

Washington, May 6.—The next battle ground on which President Taft and Colonel Roosevelt will contend for delegates will be Ohio.

It is likely that the closing days of the campaign in Ohio will surpass in interest the remarkable campaigns that have been carried on in Massachusetts and Maryland. President Taft attaches great importance to the results in Ohio. The primaries will be held on May 21.

The managers of both the Taft and Roosevelt headquarters are awaiting with keen interest the outcome of the Maryland primaries. Both sides are claiming the state. The managers of both sides admit that the negro vote is likely to be the determining factor in the fight in Maryland.

Roosevelt Wins in Texas.

Austin, Tex., May 6.—It is now definitely known that Roosevelt practically swept the state in the precinct primary conventions, although early reports indicated that Taft was in the lead. Colonel Cecil Lyon, the Roosevelt manager, claims a solid Roosevelt delegation of forty voters will be sent to the national convention.

Would Tag Unmarried Persons.
Boston, May 6.—Mrs. Frank Page advocates the wearing of badges or buttons by all unmarried men and women to denote their eligibility for marriage. She believes that the eligibility of both men and women should not remain a mystery or depend upon the frankness and honesty of the person whose position is at issue.

Man Who Opened Civil War Is Dead.
Dalton, Ga., May 6.—Daniel Carey, who claimed the distinction of having fired the first shot in the Civil War, died here. He based his assertion on the fusillade aimed at the ship Star of the West off Morris Island prior to the bombardment of Fort Sumter.

Price of Health.

To judge by letters received from correspondents, the average person does not really want to be cured. He only wants relief, which is quite a different thing. Or, at least, if he does want to be cured, he is seldom willing to pay the price—not in money, that is trifling, but the price in patience and perseverance and self-control.—Los Angeles Times.

FOUND UNCONSCIOUS IN A HALLWAY

Girl Was Missing in New York For Five Weeks.

New York, May 6.—Elsie Nichols, the young girl from Winchester, Va., who is a cousin of the late United States Senator John W. Daniel, of that state, was found by the police after a search of five weeks instigated by United States Senator O'Gorman at the request of members of Miss Nichols' family.

Policeman James Wynne, found her unconscious in a hallway at 3318 West One Hundred and Sixteenth street. She was looked up in the station house with a charge of intoxication against her. Later Magistrate Herbert, remanded her to the custody of Miss Macanley, the probation officer.

Miss Nichols came from Winchester about the middle of March with the notion of becoming a trained nurse. Her aunt, Mrs. Calhoun, with whom she stayed at 78 West One Hundred and Fifth street, believed that the girl had had some trouble at home and that she came to New York to forget it. On March 26 last Miss Nichols left the home of her aunt to go, she said, to Roosevelt hospital. She meant to inquire what chance she had of being admitted to the nurses' training school. After several days passed and there was no word from the girl Mrs. Calhoun wrote to friends in Washington who asked Senator O'Gorman if he could do anything. The senator wrote a letter to Police Commissioner Waldo and the commissioner set half a dozen men at work looking up traces of the girl.

MAN HIT BY 11,000 VOLTS

Burned All Hair Off His Head and His Shoulder Black.

Mount Vernon, N. Y., May 6.—Samuel Ehrhardt, a porter connected with Buffalo Bill's wild west company, escaped electrocution by the narrowest margin.

Eleven thousand volts passed through Ehrhardt's body. He was walking on top of one of the animal cars in the Mount Vernon freight yards, when his head came in contact with one of the feed wires which furnishes the electricity for running the trains on the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad.

There was a blinding flash and Ehrhardt was hurled from the car to the roadbed. The electricity burned all the hair off the porter's head and his shoulder was burned black.

"It was all over in the twinkling of an eye," said Ehrhardt. "Thinking of a great roar in my head and I knew no more. I suffered no pain."

There can be little doubt that so intelligent an insect as a bee has a long memory and a keen eye for landmarks. A bee would be lost at midnight because it could not recognize its surroundings.

The Prodigal Judge

Illustrations by D. M. Kester

CHAPTER XXV.

At about the same hour that the judge was hurrying threats and insults at Colonel Fentress, three men were waiting ten miles away at the head of the bayou which served to isolate Hicks' cabin. Now no one of these three had ever heard of Judge Slocum Price; the breath of his fame had never blown, however gently, in their direction, yet they were preparing to thrust opportunity upon him. To this end they were lounging about the opening in the woods where the horses belonging to Ware and Murrell were tied.

At length the dip of oars became audible in the silence and one of the trio stole down the path, a matter of fifty yards, to a point that overlooked the bayou. He was gone but a moment.

"It's Murrell all right!" he said in an eager whisper. "Him and another fellow—the Hicks girl is rowing them." He glanced from one to the other of his companions, who seemed to take firmer hold of themselves under his eye. "It'll be all right," he protested lightly. "He's as good as ours. Wait till I give you the word." And he led the way into an adjacent thicket.

Meantime Ware and Murrell had landed and were coming along the path, the outlaw a step or two in advance of his friend. They reached the horses and were untangling them when the thicket suddenly disgorged the three men; each held a cocked pistol; two of these pistols covered Murrell and the third was leveled at Ware.

"Hues!" cried Murrell in astonishment, for the man confronting him was the Clan's messenger who should have been speeding across the state.

"Toss up your hands, Murrell," said Hues quietly.

One of the other men spoke.

"You are under arrest!"

"Arrest!"

"You are wanted for nigger-stealing," said the man. Still Murrell did not seem to comprehend. He looked at Hues in dull wonder.

"What are you doing here?" he asked.

"Waiting to arrest you—ain't that plain?" said Hues, with a grim smile.

The outlaw's hands dropped at his side, limp and helpless. With some idea that he might attempt to draw a weapon one of the men took hold of him, but Murrell was nervous to his touch; his face had gone a ghastly white and was streaked with the markings of terror.

"Well, by thunder!" cried the man in utter amazement.

Murrell looked into Hues' face.

"You—you—" and the words thickened on his tongue, becoming an inarticulate murmur.

"It's all up, John," said Hues.

"No!" said Murrell, recovering himself. "You may as well turn me loose—you can't arrest me!"

"I've done it," answered Hues. "I've been on your track for six months."

"How about this fellow?" asked the man whose pistol still covered Ware. Hues glanced toward the planter and shook his head.

"Where are you going to take me?" asked Murrell quickly. Again Hues laughed.

"You'll find that out in plenty of time, and then your friends can pass the word around if they like; now you'll come with me."

Ware neither moved nor spoke as Hues and his prisoner passed back along the path, Hues with his hand on Murrell's shoulder, and one of his companions close at his heels, while the third man led off the outlaw's horse.

Presently the distant clatter of hoofs was borne to Ware's ears—only that; the miracle of courage and daring he had half expected had not happened. Murrell, for all his wild boasting, was like other men, like himself. His bloodshot eyes slid around in their sockets. There across the sunlit stretch of water was Betty—the thought of her brought him to quick choking terrors. The whole fabric of crime by which he had been benefited in the past or had expected to profit in the future seemed tottering in upon him, but his mind clutched one important fact. Hues, if he knew of Betty's disappearance, did not connect Murrell with it. Ware sucked in comfort between his twitching lips. Stealing niggers? No one would believe that he, a planter, had a hand in that, and for a brief instant he considered signaling Bess to return. Slosson must be told of Murrell's arrest; but he was sick with apprehension, some trap might have been prepared for him, he could not know; and the impulse to act forsook him.

He smote his hands together in a hopeless, beaten gesture. And Murrell had gone weak—with his own eyes he had seen it—Murrell—whom he believed without fear! He felt that he had been grievously betrayed in his trust and a hot rage poured through him. At last he climbed into the saddle, and, swaying like a drunken man, galloped off.

When he reached the river road he paused and scanned its dusty surface. Hues and his party had turned south when they issued from the wood path. No doubt Murrell was being taken to Memphis. Ware laughed harshly. The outlaw would be free before another dawn broke.

He had halted near where Jim had turned his team the previous night after Betty and Hannibal had left the carriage; the marks of the wheels were as plainly distinguishable as the more recent trail left by the four men, and as he grasped the significance of that wide half circle his sense of injury overwhelmed him again. He hoped to live to see Murrell hanged!

He was so completely lost in his bitter reflections that he had been unaware of a mounted man who was coming toward him at a swift gallop, but now he heard the steady pounding of hoofs and, startled by the sound, looked up. A moment later the horseman drew rein at his side.

"Ware!" he cried.

"How are you, Carrington?" said the planter.

"You are wanted at Belle Plain," began Carrington, and seemed to hesitate.

"Yes—yes, I am going there at once—now—" stammered Ware, and gathered up his reins with a shaking hand.

"You've heard, I take it?" said Carrington slowly.

"Yes," answered Ware, in a hoarse whisper. "My God, Carrington, I'm heart sick; she has been like a daughter to me—I—" he fell silent, moping his face.

"I think I understand your feeling," said Carrington, giving him a level glance.

"Then you'll excuse me," and the planter clapped spurs to his horse. Once he looked back over his shoulder; he saw that Carrington had not moved from the spot where they had met.

At Belle Plain, Ware found his neighbors in possession of the place. They greeted him quietly and spoke in subdued tones of their sympathy. The planter listened with an air of such abject misery that those who had neither liked nor respected him, were roused to a sudden generous feeling where he was concerned; they could not question but that he was deeply affected. After all the man might have a side to his nature with which they had never come in contact.

When he could he shut himself in his room. He had experienced a day of maddening anxiety; he had not slept at all the previous night; in mind and body he was worn out; and now he was plunged into the thick of this sensation. He must keep control of himself, for every word he said would be remembered. In the present there was sympathy for him, but sooner or later people would return to their sordid unemotional judgments.

He sought to forecast the happenings of the next few hours. Murrell's friends would break jail for him, that was a foregone conclusion; but the insurance he had planned was at an end. Hues had dealt its death blow. Moreover, though the law might be impotent to deal with Murrell, he could not hope to escape the vengeance of the powerful class he had plotted to destroy; he would have to quit the country. Ware gloated in this idea of craven flight. Thank God, he had seen the last of him!

But, as always, his thoughts came back to Betty. Slosson would wait at Hicks' place for the man Murrell had promised him, and, failing the messenger, for the signal fire, but there would be neither; and Slosson would be left to determine his own course of action. Ware felt certain that he would wait through the night, but as sure as the morning broke, if no word had reached him, he would send one of his men across the bayou, who must learn of Murrell's arrest, escape, flight—or in Ware's mind these three events were indissolubly associated. The planter's teeth knocked together. He was having a terrible acquaintance with fear, its very depths had swallowed him up; it was a black pit in which he sank from horror to horror. He had lost all faith in the Clan which had terrorized half a dozen states, which had robbed and murdered with apparent impunity, which had marketed its hundreds of stolen slaves. He had utterly collapsed at the first blow dealt the organization, but he was still seeing Murrell, pallid and shaken.

A step sounded in the hall and an instant later Hicks entered the room without the formality of knocking. Ware recognized his presence with a glance of indifference, but did not speak. Hicks slouched to his employer's side and handed him a note which proved to be from Fentress. Ware read and tossed it aside.

"If he wants to see me why don't he come here?" he growled.

"I reckon that old fellow they call Judge Price has sprung something sudden on the colonel," said Hicks.

"He was out here the first thing this morning; you'd have thought he owned Belle Plain. There was a couple of strangers with him, and he had me in and fired questions at me for half an hour; then he hiked off up to The Oaks."

"Murrell's been arrested," said Ware in a dull level voice. Hicks gave him a glance of unmixed astonishment.

"No!"

"Yes, by God!"

"Who'd risk it?"

"Risk it? Man, he almost fainted dead away—a damned toward, Hell!"

"How do you know this?" asked

Hicks, appalled.

"I was with him when he was taken—it was Hues—the man he trusted more than any other!" Ware gave the overseer a ghastly grin and was silent, but in that silence he heard the drumming of his own heart. He went on. "I tell you, to save himself, John Murrell will implicate the rest of us; we've got to get him free, and then, by hell—we ought to knock him in the head; he isn't fit to live!"

"The jail ain't built that'll hold him!" muttered Hicks.

"Of course, he can't be held," agreed Ware. "And he'll never be brought to trial; no lawyer will dare appear against him, no jury will dare find him guilty; but there's Hues, what about him?" He paused. The two men looked at each other for a long moment.

"Where did they carry the captain?"

"I don't know."

"It looks like the Clan was in a hell-fired hole—but shucks! What will be easier than to fix Hues?—and while they're fixing folks they'd better not overlook that old fellow Price. He's got some notion about Fentress and the boy." Mr. Hicks did not consider it necessary to explain that he was himself largely responsible for this.

"How do you know that?" demanded Ware.

"He as good as said so." Hicks looked uneasily at the planter. He knew himself to be compromised. The stranger named Cavendish had forced an admission from him that Murrell would not condone if it came to his knowledge. He had also acquired a very proper and wholesome fear of Judge Slocum Price. He stepped close to Ware's side. "What'll come of the girl, Tom? Can you figure that out?" he questioned, sinking his voice almost to a whisper. But Ware was incapable of speech, again his terrors completely overwhelmed him. "I reckon you'll have to find another overseer. I'm going to strike out for Texas," said Hicks.

Ware's eyes met his for an instant. He had thought of flight, too; was still thinking of it, but greed was as much a part of his nature as fear; Belle Plain was a prize not to be lightly cast aside, and it was almost his. He lurched across the room to the window. If he were going to act, the sooner he did so the better, and gain a respite from his fears. The road down the coast slid away before his heavy eyes; he marked each turn, then a palsy of fear shook him, his heart beat against his ribs, and he stood gnawing his lips while he gazed up at the sun.

"Do you get what I say, Tom? I am going to quit these parts," said Hicks. Ware turned slowly from the window.

"All right, Hicks. You mean you want me to settle with you, is that it?" he asked.

"Yes, I'm going to leave while I can; maybe I can't later on," said Hicks stolidly. He added: "I am going to start down the coast as soon as it turns dark, and before it's day again I'll have put the good miles between me and these parts."

"You're going down the coast?" and Ware was again conscious of the quickened beating of his heart. Hicks nodded. "See you don't meet up with John Murrell," said Ware.

"I'll take that chance. It seems a heap better to me than staying here."

Ware looked from the window. The shadows were lengthening across the lawn.

"Better start now, Hicks," he advised.

"I'll wait until it turns dark."

"You'll need a horse."

"I was going to help myself to one. This ain't no time to stand on ceremony," said Hicks shortly.

"Slosson shouldn't be left in the lurch like this—or your brother's folks—"

"They'll have to figure it out for themselves, same as me," rejoined Hicks.

"You can stop there as you go by."

"No," said Hicks. "I never did believe in this damn foolishness about the girl, and I won't go near George's—"

"I don't ask you to go there; you can give them the signal from the head of the bayou. All I want is for you to stop and light a fire on the shore. They'll know what that means. I'll give you a horse and fifty dollars for the job."

Hicks' eyes sparkled, but he only said:

"Make it twice that and maybe we can deal."

Racked and tortured, Ware hesitated; but the sun was slipping into the west; his windows blazed with the hot light.

"You swear you'll do your part?" he said thickly. He took his purse from his pocket and counted out the amount due Hicks. He named the total, and paused irresolutely.

"Don't you want the fire lighted?" asked Hicks. He was familiar with his employer's vacillating moods.

"Yes," answered Ware, his lips quivering; and slowly, with shaking fingers, he added to the pile of bills in Hicks' hand.

"Well, take care of yourself," said Hicks, when the count was complete. He thrust the roll of bills into his pocket and moved to the door.

Alone again, the planter collapsed into his chair, breathing heavily, but his terrors swept over him and left him with a savage sense of triumph. This passed; he sprang up, intending to recall Hicks and unmake his bargain. What had he been thinking of—safety lay only in flight! Before he reached the door his greed was in the ascendant. He dropped down on the edge of his bed, his eyes fixed on the window. The sun sank lower. From where he sat he saw it through the upper half of the sash, blood-red and livid in a mist of fleecy clouds.

It was in the tops of the old oaks now, which sent their shadows into his room. Again saddened by his terrors, he started and backed toward the door; but again his greed, the one dominating influence of his life, vanquished him.

He watched the sun sink. He watched the red splendor fade over the river; he saw the first glare appear. He told himself that Hicks would soon be gone—if the fire was not to be lighted he must act at once! He stole to the window. It was dusk now, yet he could distinguish the distant wooded boundaries of the great fields framed by the darkening sky. Then in the silence he heard the thud of hoofs.

The illustrated press has been giving the country some very interesting pictures of the recent academic festival in connection with the installation of Chancellor Brown at the University of New York. In all its scholarly pageantry the scene is dignified and inspiring. In cap and gown and hood and cape, Ambassadors James Bryce, Mr. Andrew Carnegie, senators, Judges, college presidents are seen sweeping up the broad stone walk past the portico of a classic college building. The effect is fine. But where are they all headed? Directly and inevitably toward a huge gas tank. This monstrosity pokes itself into the photographs at all angles. Apparently there is not room for the camera to get away from it. The leagues which are working toward the common-sense
